Expanding opportunities in the multi-polar world

Accenture helps to build sustainable livelihoods in communities across the world.

The multi-polar world broadens the opportunities to do this.

Many Accenture women chose...

to use their professional skills...

to make a difference.

Laura Martinez Alvaro – Madrid
Manager, Accenture

Laura worked on a Pro Bono basis with the Spanish Red Cross.

“Well, I think as a citizen, as a professional worker, as a mother, we should all include in our activities of social work. All of us, all individuals. If we have the facility to do that kind of social work at our firm, I think it’s wonderful.

Alefiya Rajkotwala – London
Senior Manager, Accenture

Alefiya worked in Rwanda on a project with Voluntary Service Overseas.

“Wanting to work in a third world country and live there and do something that contributed to that country rather than a rich country, is something that I’ve been wanting to do for a long time.”

Steffi Friedrich – Munich
Manager, Accenture

Steffi worked in the Philippines on a Voluntary Service Overseas placement.

“I was really happy to have had the opportunity to share my knowledge and my skills which I gained in the company. It’s not easy, it’s very challenging but to see the results and to see the people, how thankful they are is just unforgettable.”

Trang Pham – Reston, Virginia
Manager, Accenture

Trang took an Accenture Development Partnerships placement in Kenya.

Corporate Citizenship
(Accenture Women Making a Difference)

“We’re piloting something so that we can scale it up across the country and give this opportunity not just to fifty people but you know to five hundred thousand people. I find it like very challenging and then professionally I also find it very rewarding because I can see the actual tangible results of my effort.”

Jo Ensor
Chief Executive
African Medical and Research Foundation (AMREF) United Kingdom

Accenture and AMREF’s eLearning program has accelerated the training of nurses in Africa.

“I’ve seen so many people who’ve been transformed by the experience that they’ve had working with the Accenture staff in terms of their project management skills, their confidence, their understanding of the project. So, the impact is very great.”

Jill Huntley – London
Director of Corporate Citizenship, Accenture

“Corporate citizenship is very important to Accenture both in terms of the immediate community in which we live and work today and in terms of the future business that we’re building. Our approach is to give both money and time skills, we feel both are important and equally valuable so it’s not either or, it’s both. In fact we’ve found with some of the longer term partnerships that we have with non-profit organizations, the time and skills becomes most important because it’s the thing they have least access to.”
