How long were you at Accenture?

What was your last role?

Alice Heezen

Accenture: 1994 - 1998

"I worked for Accenture from '94 to '98 and I was in Change Management working for the Products Division but at the end I was in the Scheduling Division."

Azhar Alani

Accenture: 2001 to 2006

"I spent six years with Accenture and by the time I left I was managing a project with one of the biggest oil companies in the UK."

Tim Garrod

Accenture: 1997 to 2000

"I joined Accenture in 1997, I was there for three years and I actually left to join one of Accentures ventures, so I didn't really go very far - which was Imagine Broadband."

Holly Crane

Accenture: 1999 to 2003

“I was at Accenture for 4 years and my role when I left was Human Performance and Change Management Consultant doing client facing roles.”

What did you enjoy most about working at Accenture?

Donna Gildea

Accenture: 1997 to 2002

“Probably the variety, the challenges, lots of projects and I guess the learning experiences because while sometimes it’s a little stressful you always have something new to take on and something new to learn. You are still picking up on new industries, new technology and working with new people all the time.”

Learning Experiences

James Duffy

Accenture: 2000 to 2002

“The opportunities that it provided I did quite a lot of different projects, not just in this country but all over the world. And the best part of it was actually a 2 month stint out in Asia working both in Hong Kong and Tokyo on quite an exciting project”

Nigel Roxburgh

Accenture: 2006 to 2007

“I enjoyed most about Accenture the high quality and caliber of the people I worked with and also the client base which Accenture brings to it, so that was a real challenge on both levels working with people who were exciting and challenging to work with and clients who were likewise.”

High quality people

High quality clients

Martin Dowson

Accenture: 2000 to 2005

“What I most enjoyed was walking into a client and often having to think on your feet about how you could best present what it is that you knew you knew but actually be able to make it relevant for your clients.”

Quick response client environment

Develop relevant strategy

Monika Eordoghne Zsigri

Accenture: 1997 to 2003

“Accenture gave me much opportunity to learn and that’s quite an important thing. Compared with the last job that I had, there is so much knowledge within Accenture that I just couldn’t get to within another company.”

Opportunity to learn

Superior knowledge base

Kate Adey

Accenture: 1996 to 2002

“The community of people, being on large projects, the opportunity also to travel around, which has pros and cons but I think actually, when you are starting out, is a great opportunity to be able to see different countries, different clients and work with cross cultural teams.”

What’s your favorite memory of your time at Accenture?

Daniel Howells

Accenture: 2004 to 2006

“Core analyst school without a doubt. I was a really good opportunity to meet people from different parts of the world, different projects, different clients and everyone getting into a room together and discussing their experiences - really exciting, very high energy and a great social life as well.”

Kate Adey

Accenture: 1996 to 2002

“I think my favorite memory is probably working in Dublin, I was over there for about a year and a half. it was a fun environment, we were setting up a green field site for the European Service Centre. Great bunch of people, about 150 of us, great party, hard work - that really stands out for me.”

Nigel Roxburgh

Accenture: 2006 to 2007

“It’s always a favorite memory when you’re in the marketing position of winning deals.”

Alastair Birt

Accenture: 1994 to 2002

“I thought there was very good camaraderie and the way it was organized meant there were always nights out, always a laugh, party hard work hard, but it was really good fun.”

Donna Gildea

Accenture: 1997 to 2002

“Definitely the people I met. My favorite memories generally go back to the start groups. I am here with some of my friends from my start groups this evening and from project to project there were always people there to support you whatever the challenges that came about.”
